what am I, a ninja? When the powers that be assigned this review, they must have thought it was And, hey, whipping up two sundaes and a salad in the ten seconds it took to bake a pizza and fry a steak is something a ninja can do, right? That, and a short-order cook. But short-order cooks rarely enter the realms of five-star restaurants, which is exactly why you are trying to go in Gamedino's time-management cooking simulation game, Family Restaurant. Based on a popular flash game, Family Restaurant is the very familiar 'assembly line' type of puzzle experience. Create the ordered dish as closely to the desired specification and as fast as possible; grab ingredients from the side and arrange them over the dish as required. It might involve some baking or frying. It will involve much shouting and gnashing of teeth. Not only do you have a time limit for each dish, but orders flood in and can quickly stack up.
