DECORATING A TEENAGER'S BEDROOM

In the past, the children of the household had very little choice in the way their bedrooms were decorated. The fact that families had many (1)..... children than they do now was an important consideration. This meant that there was not (2)..... money available to pay for more than the basics- paint or wallpaper. Add to this the fact that children of differing ages- and tastes- had to share a room and it is easy to see why, when it went to decorating, not much thought was put into the job.

Times change, however, and now the amount spent on home decorating and DIY is (3)..... at over € 8 billion a year. Families have (4)..... greater spending power and children have more of a voice; in other words, parents have to take notice (5)..... what they want. What has become very clear is that most teenagers are aware of the latest (6)..... and they really do have a very good idea of the way they want their personal space decorated. It is then up to their parents to help them achieve the look they want.

Money is still going to be a consideration- (7)....., of course, you have recently gone into a fortune. But there is a wide range of materials to choose from and it really does pay to (8)..... around. There are (9)..... available throughout the year, so it can be done quite (10)..... Parents may argue that their child's choices are not appropriate, but it is the teenager who has to live with it, not them.

wear fancy collars. The children take place pride in caring (10) their animals, and (11) forward to the fair every year.

Besides animals, there are also displays of hand-made arts and crafts. These too are judged in competition with each (12) Looking at the hand-made quilts and sweaters, one imagines what life was (13) a hundred years ago. The county fair competitions provide a good way (14) preserving old art forms for new generations. County fairs usually last (15) about a week, and are often held in July. Visitors like to make the trip to see the animals and crafts. Kids love the excitement too. All in all, a trip to the local county fair makes for a very pleasant summer's day.
